Osteo Life – The quarterly membership newsletter of the Australian Osteopathic Association

Osteo Life is the only national publication for osteopaths in Australia. This newsletter will give you a direct line to your target market, and showcase your products or services in a medium that both informs and engages your customers.

Featuring contemporary design and quality editorial, Osteo Life covers the latest news and views from industry experts, as well as practical articles on how to run a successful business (for example, training staff, technology, administration, OH&S, marketing, financial planning and money management).

Our readers

The number of osteopaths almost doubled between 1996 and 2001 (and again between 2001 and 2006), making osteopathy the fastest growing allied health profession in Australia. Osteo Life is gaining status as an authoritative voice that represents this increasingly influential field of expertise. The sector attracted around $176m in service fees between 2007 and 2008.

About the AOA

The Australian Osteopathic Association (AOA) is the national body representing osteopaths in all states and territories. Servicing more than 1,600 members, its core work is educating members on practice and business management. The AOA also liaises with State and Federal Government, other statutory bodies and private enterprise on professional, educational, legislative and regulatory issues affecting the industry.
